Description

Lagomarsino is a large petroglyph site, a quarter of a mile in length, containing 2229 rock art panels located on an east-west trending, fine-grained basalt cliff and associated talus slope below. This trail starts right off of Lousetown Road in the Virginia City Highlands and intersects with Trail A, ultimately at the site.

Recommendations / Other Info

A small lift will help a lot here, as there are many washouts and rocks to navigate, but it can be done in a stock Jeep with some finesse. The hardest part of this trail has a bypass.
